MASTER OF EDUCATION IN EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION

Develop the skills and strategies to support young children learning at all stages

UNIVERSITY OF HARTFORD
COLLEGE OF EDUCATION,
NURSING AND HEALTH PROFESSIONS
The master’s program in early childhood education is part of the College of Education, Nursing and Health Professions’ focus on bridging traditional academics with community needs. Through experiential learning and impactful scholarship, students and faculty work collaboratively to reach a common goal, achieving excellence through relevance.

The program focuses on using an integrated model to prepare students to work with families, provide inclusive services for children, and collaborate with other industry professionals. Teachers will have the skills to work in public and private schools, childcare centers, and community-based programs with children between birth and age 8.

The program leads to the Master of Education (MEd) in Early Childhood Education through three distinct paths:

1. An initial certification program for the individual who holds a bachelor's degree and wishes to prepare for entry into the profession of teaching as a certified early childhood teacher. Students select an endorsement area of birth through kindergarten or nursery-kindergarten through third grade. Certification is integrated birth through kindergarten. Student teaching is required for certification, which will involve a full-day commitment near the end of the program of study.

2. A non-initial certification option for someone who is already a certified teacher or who may desire to teach or already is teaching in the private sector or community programs. While one may not need or desire state certification as an early childhood teacher, he or she could benefit from the curriculum content and graduate-level electives to further his or her professional career.

3. A Montessori concentration that combines Association of Montessori International (AMI) teacher training with a graduate degree. The program is a partnership between the University of Hartford and the Montessori Training Center Northeast (MTCNE).

This program is for students who are currently enrolled in or have completed an AMI teacher-training program within the past five years. The concentration in Montessori builds on the professional preparation of the Montessori-trained teacher to provide him or her with a well-rounded background in all areas of early childhood education. While this is not a certificate program, coursework contributes toward the Connecticut State Teaching Certificate Unique Endorsement #110.

CURRICULUM

Central to early childhood education is knowing the individual child in the context of family, school, and community. This knowledge of the child coupled with a developmental focus leads teachers to responsive, differentiated instruction. The ability to work with students with special needs is fully integrated into the curriculum. The goal of this program is to develop early childhood teachers as reflective practitioners who integrate understanding of their content areas, their students, current research, and theories of pedagogy.

An Individualized curriculum includes:
- Learning and developmental theories
- Knowledge of curriculum and effective teaching strategies
- Learning about cultural and diverse needs of students
- Integration of technology
- Application of skills in assessment and implementation
- Evaluation of effective educational programs

Most of our students are working and are completing their degrees by enrolling in 1-2 courses for full-time status each fall, spring, and summer session. Courses meet once per week in late afternoon or evening.
